Review: This UltraGlass one is actually solid. It's super easy to install — they give you this little plastic frame thing that lines it up for you, so you don't mess it up. I had zero bubbles and it went on smooth the first try.

Also, it doesn't get fingerprints all over it like cheaper ones do, and the edges feel clean when you swipe around. It honestly just feels like it belongs on the phone. And it says it's "military-grade" or whatever — I haven't dropped my phone from a building or anything, but it does feel like it can take a hit.

Review: The Ailun one is cheaper, but you can tell. It doesn't come with anything to help you line it up, so putting it on is annoying. I got bubbles, it was off-center at first, and the glass is thicker in a weird way. You can actually feel the edge when you swipe near the sides of your screen, which is kind of annoying.

Also, this one gets fingerprint-y super fast. Like I'm wiping my screen all the time. It works, but it doesn't feel nice to use.

Final Take: If you just want something cheap, the Ailun works. But if you care about how your phone feels and looks, the UltraGlass is way better. It just makes life easier, and for like $10 more, it's worth it. Especially if you're clumsy.
